IASP's Ethical Statement:

The International Association of Suicide Prevention will not abide a breach to its Ethical Position on Voter Solicitation or Coercion.

Voter Solicitation or Coercion is defined as: to attempt to influence or sway the voting process in a way that seriously violates the ethical standard of IASP; including aggressively soliciting voters, increasing membership numbers by paying for or recruiting members for the sole purpose of taking part in the elections, putting pressure on members to vote for them, organizing colleagues to vote.

Such actions are unprofessional and not in keeping with the ethics of our organization. IASP does not expect such behaviour from its members and will not condone or tolerate it. Such behaviour diminishes who we are, how we operate and what we believe to be the highest ethical standards as applied to all business conducted by the organization.

Please note:

Those persons who receive the greatest number of nominations will be recommended for a place on the election ballot. Each member may nominate a maximum of one candidate per position and the ballot paper will contain the names of up to three candidates for each contested office (up to three for President, General Secretary and Treasurer, and up to six for Vice President (three per VP position)).

The Election committee is also charged with ensuring inclusivity and diversity on the Board, and we encourage candidates from all sectors, volunteers, health professionals, lived experience and academics). We also encourage nominations for candidates from all continents/WHO regions to include a range of perspectives' representative of IASP's international spread.

Nominations are not official and will not be counted unless the following conditions are met:
